Angular vein Angular vein refers to the four angular veins, four pairs of anastomosing veins that leave the superficial saphenous vein in the leg and join the medial (lower) tibial vein to form the popliteal vein. The four angular veins surround the medial malleolus but only three are visible. Angular vein syndrome or angiodyplasia is a misnomer for a number of conditions presenting with angiodyplasia of the veins. Angular vein syndrome (A3) is particularly common in children. The condition often presents as leg swelling. When progressive, it can be associated with leg ulceration, or leg and groin swelling. This condition is also associated with heredity and potential complications including osteomyelitis and lymphoedema. [URL=""] [IMG] Hill is out indefinitely with a right knee strain. He was hurt in the first half of Kansas City's 42-34 loss at Jacksonville on Thursday. The reserve running back left the game and did not return. Hill had 841 yards rushing on 174 carries, an average of 4.65 yards per carry, as a rookie. He had three touchdowns. Hill is on the list of candidates to start the opener against the Pittsburgh Steelers. It was the Chiefs' first loss of the season. [Physical activity and physical fitness in children with cerebral palsy. A questionnaire survey of 100 children and their parents]. Physical activity and physical fitness of 101 children with cerebral palsy and of their parents were assessed by means of a standardized questionnaire. According to objective findings three groups of children could be distinguished: the subjects with an inability to walk, the children with spastic diplegia, and the children with mild to moderate mental retardation. The results of this study suggest that childhood cerebral palsy can be considered as a disability rather than a disease. There is no relation between the level of mental retardation and the physical activity and fitness level of the children; however, mental retardation is negatively correlated with the health-related quality of life of the children and their parents. Moreover, children with mental retardation or children with spastic diplegia are less active than those without disabilities and this is most likely to be the case in moderately mentally retarded children. Moreover, the parents of children with severe mental retardation are less confident in the treatment of the child with cerebral palsy than
